

“The Conservative Party’s Autumn Statement fails to offer solutions to the current economic crisis.

Luton and communities across the country have so much potential, but the cost of living crisis is holding us back. People are seeing their bills skyrocket while their wages are cut in real-terms, forcing many to choose between heating and eating.

After 12 years of failure and wasted opportunities, today once again proves the Conservative Party is incapable of fixing the economic mess it created. The British public needs a fresh start.

Labour would take the economy forward with a proper, long-term plan for growth, working with people and businesses to ensure living standards grow. We are committed to providing stability and global leadership to enable Britain to work towards a fairer, greener future.”
